Manager Commentary

Qatar had a particularly weak month in November with the index declining by -13%. The Fund declined less, by -10.1% and -11.1% respectively for Class Q and N. We attribute much of the decline to rebalancing in the MSCI Emerging Market Index, with an increase in China's weight causing a decline in other country weights. Also important to note that the market's -4.4% decline on the last trading day reversed mostly on the following day.

Looking at individual stocks, we find those with index weight decreases lost the most, while those with increases had near flat performance. While oil also declined in November from around US$ 50 per barrel of Brent to about US$ 45, this did not seem to materially impact other regional markets, with Saudi actually +up 1.7%, Kuwait up +0.5% and Abu Dhabi down -2.0%.

Currently we see many Qatari stocks valued at below their intrinsic value, with some even below their book value. We expect this weakness to be likely temporary and potentially a good buying opportunity for select stocks.
